13 *Historic Home on Cape Cod

Visit the historic village of Yarmouth Port, on the Cape's north side. Built in the 1870s by Susannah Vesey's great-great grandfather, this Greek Revival style house is on the National Register of Historic Places. It sits midway along Route 6A, a scenic and historic byway otherwise known as the Old King's Highway. The road meanders through quaint New England villages, past marshes and beaches, antique shops and art galleries, and old cemeteries and churches. One of those, three miles from the house, is the Unitarian Church of Barnstable, whose senior minister, the Rev. Dr. Kristen L. Harper, spoke at Rev. Abhi's installation. The three-story house comfortably sleeps ten. The third floor has three bedrooms: A large master with a full bed, a second room with two twins, and a third is a converted attic with two twins. A second master room is located on the main, middle floor in what originally was the parlor. It has a queen bed with a TempurPedic mattress and a half bath. The fifth bedroom is on the lower level, with two twins and a small bath with shower, and opens onto a back porch. A fully equipped kitchen/family room combination is on the main floor, along with a more formal parlor and a full bath. Behind the house is a three-story barn. The property goes all the way back to the marsh. The house is available for a full week plus two weekends (ten nights, Friday through a week from the following Monday), year round. Dates flexible and to be arranged with Susannah.

417 *Fused Glass Plate Making Workshop

There's room for two (adults or children over 10) in the Joy of Glass studio (joyofglass.com) of Merilee Harrigan, a River Road UUC member, on Saturday, January 12, 2019, 1-4 pm. This three-hour lesson will teach the basics of fused glass design and creation, help you make a round or square plate that will be fired in the studio kiln and ready for pick up or delivery after January 14. The studio afternoon includes cheese, crackers, wine and other beverages and snacks. The studio is on the third floor of Merilee's Chevy Chase home, so, yes, there are steps. All equipment and supplies are included. There is an endless variety of glass types, colors, and textures. This event is sponsored by Donna Simonton, who just completed four seasonal chalice plates, and discovered the "joy of glass" at an art show at Paint Branch UUC, so this is a UU fusion auction item. Auction winners may invite one or two guests to attend, paying a reduced cost on the day of the workshop. Transportation provided, if desired. A great holiday or birthday gift for someone special.
